Phone Investigation Recording

Investigator: Hello, hello, is this the kidney transplant office? Kidney transplantation ward?

Doctor: Yes. Kidney transplantation [department].

Investigator: One of my family members wants to do a kidney transplant surgery. Can you please tell me how long we will have to wait for the transplantation, after we come here?

Doctor: How long? [With an organ] from a relative or someone else?

Investigator: Not [from] a relative, an allograft.

Doctor: From someone else, right?

Investigator: Yes, yes.

Doctor: Okay, please wait a moment.

[Switched to another female doctor.]

Doctor: Hello!

Investigator: Hello, hello! [Doctor: Hi, hello!] Doctor, I’m from Handan.

Doctor: Where are you from?

Investigator: Handan, Hebei Province.

Doctor: From Hebei Province, right?

Investigator: Yes, Hebei Province.

Doctor: Are you consulting for your family member, yourself, or your friend?

Investigator: A family member. A family member.

Doctor: No. Well, we can’t explain clearly on the phone. How about you coming to our hospital to consult for detailed information?

Investigator: [Yes.] But I still want to know how long I would wait for the surgery. If your hospital performs a lot of kidney transplant surgeries, we wouldn't wait too long for our turn, right? Do you do a lot [of kidney transplant surgeries]?

Doctor: Oh, relatively speaking, our hospital has relatively more ample kidney sources than the other hospitals. That's means that the probability of a patient obtaining a matching [organ] is a bit larger.

Investigator: Okay. So have you done a lot of kidney transplant surgeries this year? From the beginning of this year to the present?

Doctor: By now, we should've done 200 to 300 cases [of kidney transplantation].

Investigator: Okay. 200 to 300 cases. Then your hospital can do 500 or 600 cases per year, right?

Doctor: Well, last year we did more than 300 cases. We don't know about this year yet. Because we don't know whether we can get a lot of kidney sources or not in the latter half of the year.

Investigator: Okay. So it's impossible to estimate. Only the first half of the year...

Doctor: Yes. This is impossible to estimate, as it's not based on human [factors].

Doctor: Well, we are particularly busy here. If you have other questions, I suggest you come to our hospital in person, okay? Because we can't explain clearly on the phone. It's particularly noisy on our side, too.

Investigator: Okay.

Doctor: Okay. Goodbye.
