Phone Investigation Recording

Investigator: Hello, is this the Red Cross of Changzhou City?

Staff: Hey, yes.

Investigator: I want to ask about the situation of organ donations, of which you are in charge. Are the organ donations mainly for your local hospitals, or they also be used to support other places?

Staff: This...this depends on the situation.

Investigator: Oh, what you mean?

Staff: This is not our business; the organ distribution is done by the provincial health department. They are responsible for the organ distribution.

Investigator: Oh, which section of the health department?

Staff: The provincial health and family planning commission [Investigator: Oh.] of our Jiangsu Province Health Department.

Investigator: Oh, they are in charge of the distribution, right?

Staff: Yes.

Investigator: Oh, I would like to ask, are there many people donating organs in your area?

Staff: Ah ... not many.

Investigator: Oh, that means, the demand is beyond the supply. How many cases would you have for one year? I mean voluntarily ... and successful donations.

Staff: Five to ten a year.

Investigator: Five to ten ... how about the successful ... I mean the ones successfully excised...

Staff: Yes, five to ten cases of successful donations.

Investigator: Five to ten ... oh [Staff: Right.] So how many cases have you received this year?

Staff: This year ah ...? [Investigator: Yes.] We have received four cases this year.

Investigator: Are these four cases with successful [organ] excisions?

Staff: Yes.

Investigator: In Changzhou, which hospitals are good at performing organ transplant surgeries? And which types of transplantation surgeries are their specialties?

Staff: Only the First People's Hospital of Changzhou is qualified to perform organ transplants.

Investigator: What kinds of transplantation does it do?

Staff: Kidney transplantation.

Investigator: How about the other transplants, such as heart or liver transplants. They cannot do them?

Staff: No, [these're done] only in Nanjing and Shanghai.

Investigator: If we want to look for the [type of donors] through the judicial system, like in the previous years, there were a lot of..

Staff: It does not work now.

Investigator: Can that kind of [organs of] [Falun] Gong practitioners be found?

Staff: No.

Investigator: No, ah... Their [organs] are no longer allowed to be used or there are other reasons...

Staff: Cannot be used... You are right.

Investigator: Oh ... Why could they be used in previous years?

Staff: Hey, this is a legal issue. When you ask me ... I cannot explain it to you.

Investigator: Oh ... I see.

Staff: Yes.

Investigator: Oh, ok ... so you mean that you can only provide [organs] for local use or ...

Staff: Jiangsu, Jiangsu, yes.

Investigator: Jiangsu, only for use in Jiangsu?

Staff: Yes, uh.

Investigator: Oh, that's it. [Staff: Yes.] When did you begin to implement organ donations?

Staff: Year 2011.

Investigator: Oh, in 2011. From 2011 up until now, how many donations you have received, like the successful donations in the past few years?

Staff: Uh ... 29 cases.

Investigator: I am thinking that I should find one place, where they have a lot of donations, so that I can contact them to...

Staff: Are you in need [of donors] or what else?

Investigator: Yes, we are. We need [donors].

Staff: Ah?

Investigator: We need [donors].

Staff: Generally speaking, Shanghai would have a little more. Yes, Shanghai.

Investigator: Well, then I can contact...you said that I can find [organs] in Shanghai, right?

Staff: Yes, then you can contact other channels by yourself, our Red Cross does not [have organs] ... We just monitor the formal procedure in this aspect and spread propaganda. The rest of the work is not our business.

Investigator: Oh. [Staff: Well.] Oh, yeah, this is the case.

[The phone rang...]

Investigator: Ok. Thank you! Thanks!

Staff: Uh. Goodbye.

Investigator: Uh, Bye-bye.
