Phone Investigation Recording

Nurse: Hello, kidney transplantation.

Investigator: Hello, kidney transplantation, is this Shandong Provincial Hospital?

Nurse: Yes.

Investigator: Oh, then, I would like to ask you about, do you do kidney transplantation in your hospital? I have a family member, who wants to go there to do it.

Nurse: We do.

Investigator: You do, are there a lot of people lining up for that?

Nurse: Do you do [a surgery] with a relative’s [organ] or what?

Investigator: I want to do an allogenic transplant. I don’t have a family member, who can donate a kidney.

Nurse: A lot [of people on the waiting list].

Investigator: Ah?

Nurse: A lot [of people on the waiting list].

Investigator: Yes, are you doing a lot this year? Have you already started this year?

Nurse: Oh, we’ve already done a lot this year! We did several cases in recent several days.

Investigator: In addition to kidney transplantation, you also do liver transplantation, right? I will do both.

Nurse: We do.

Investigator: Because I see now in Shandong Province, there are so many hospitals doing kidney transplantation, so I would like to know which hospital does more. So I’ll go there to get in the queue list. I’m thinking that will be a little faster.

Nurse: Just come here, it’s very fast, anyway.

Investigator: Like before, that type [of organs from] the judicial system, that type from death-row prisoners. Can you still use them? Like that type? You all used that type in the past...

Nurse: What?

Investigator: I mean, in the past, before year 2015, they all used the [organs from] death-row inmates and [Falun] Gong practitioners. Can you still use that type now?

Nurse: Now we cannot.

Investigator: Not anymore? Because previously, all hospitals were using these types [of organs from] death-row prisoners and [Falun] Gong practitioners, right? When my friend had his surgery, he used this type, from a practitioner. So after he did [the surgery], he said that his physical condition was particularly good. So now you say that you cannot use it anymore?

Nurse: No more.

Investigator: No more. [Nurse: Cannot do it anymore.] You can't use it for how many years now?

Nurse: About two years.

Investigator: Two years. So in the past you could use them? The other hospitals also used this type?

Nurse: Yes, we used this kind, and also [the organs from patients'] relatives. Both.

Investigator: Oh, the relatives were the exceptions. Generally speaking, the allografts were from death-row prisoners and practitioners, right?

Nurse: Yes, they were, in the past.

Investigator: Oh, in the past, how did you excise donor [organs]? Did you excise them in your hospital or in prisons?

Nurse: I really don't know about this.

Investigator: You do not know. [Nurse: Right] Anyway, you know that you used death row prisoner and practitioner donors?

Nurse: Yes.

Investigator: Ok, fine, how about this? I don't have time tomorrow. Maybe on Monday, I will call Director Meng to ask him again, ok?

Nurse: Yes, you can.

Investigator: Ok, great, here you have only a nurses' office. Is there a doctors' office? And a phone number [for it]?

Nurse: This is the doctors' office phone.

Investigator: Oh, this is the doctor... You don't have [a separate office]. That is, the nurses and the doctors are all in the same office? [Have the same] phone?

Nurse: Ah, yes, our offices are together.

Investigator: Oh, then you, you are a doctor?

Nurse: I'm a nurse.

Investigator: Oh, ok, fine, I just want to ask about it. Then that's all. Thank you, ok, goodbye!

Nurse: good, bye!
